SEPTEMBER IS THE BEST TIME TO AERATE YOUR LAWN!

Most of us have fescue lawns. Fall is the most important time of the year to fertilize and core aerate fescue. As temperatures cool, the grass plants begin to send out more tillers and also begin to produce and save carbohydrates for next year's green-up. Correctly fertilized lawns begin spring growth earlier than those that have not been fed. They also develop more strength to compete against weeds. Fall is absolutely the best time to aerate and over-seed your lawn.

Core aeration is an excellent turf management practice if your yard has clay soil. Aeration increases oxygen availability to turf roots and reduces compaction, both of which give turf more vigor and health. It is done in conjunction with fall fertilization since root growth is at its maximum at this time of year and fertilizer penetration becomes more effective through the core holes.

If there are thinner areas in your lawn that need over-seeding, this is the perfect time to aerate. Verti-cutting and over-seeding after the aeration cores are pulled allows the seed to penetrate more easily and to be covered with soil from the shredded cores, resulting in better germination.

Relax, make life easier, and save money by using one company for all of your outdoor maintenance needs!
